Michiganders:
Give us diverse transportation solutions!

Forum participants tell policymakers they want better bus, train, pedestrian options

JACKSON, MI - Michiganders across the state, and in Jackson, want state legislators to diversify our state transportation system with more options – from high speed trains to more walkable communities.

In late October 2011, Governor Rick Snyder announced his intention to reverse years of lacking investment in Michigan’s transportation system. Trans4M went on a mission to find out what kind of transportation system Michigan wanted. A series of 18 Community Forums were hosted by local groups all over the state throughout 2012, and attended by hundreds of people from Detroit to St. Joseph, and all the way up to Houghton.
